Is Lonité a legitimate Swiss laboratory?

Yes. Lonité AG is registered at Bachtobelstrasse 5, 8810 Horgen, Switzerland. Members of FIAT-IFTA, SVB, and JLGDA. Each diamond is certified by IGI. The 99.99% carbon purity is independently validated by Intertek.

How long does the process take?

Approximately twelve months from when Lonité receives the cremated remains. Months 1 through 10 cover extraction, purification, and HPHT growth in the Swiss laboratory. Months 11 and 12 cover cut, polish, IGI certification, and shipment.

What does it cost?

Pricing scales by carat and color. The full pricing matrix across six colors is published at lonite.com/price. Use code MEMORIALMERITS for $100 off your order at checkout, applied as a flat discount on whatever you choose.

Why IGI certification and not GIA?

IGI is the industry standard for grading lab-grown diamonds. GIA dominates natural diamonds. For a lab-grown memorial diamond, IGI is the correct certifying institute. The certificate grades the 4 Cs of the finished stone.

Does enough carbon really survive cremation?

Yes. Cremated remains contain elemental carbon. Lonité extracts that carbon, removes nitrogen or boron depending on the target color, and processes the result to 99.99% pure carbon before HPHT synthesis begins.

What if I am not ready to commit today?

There is no pressure to decide now. The cremated remains you have are the only ones you will have, and the decision deserves the time it takes to make it correctly. When you are ready, Tracy Tout at Lonité walks you through the welcome kit.
